YOU NEED REPRESENTATION

Real estate transactions are more complex than most people realize. Almost all elements of a real estate transaction are NEGOTIABLE. Whether the negotiations will be in your favor as the buyer greatly depends on whether you have proper representation by a Buyer's Broker.

Traditional brokerage practice makes the real estate listing agent (licensee) an agent or sub-agent of the seller. They must get the "best deal" for the seller. This includes pricing, marketing, and contract negotiations. That seller's agent may not point out any negative features to you when you inquire about the home they have for sale.

However, when you are a buyer and employ a Buyer's Broker such as Connie Rice and Partners, that agent will work to get the best deal for YOU. They will look out for your best interest during the entire process, pointing out both positive and negative features of the home and area BEFORE you get involved in a contract. You will receive information about the value of the property which will help you to make a wise choice and offer a fair price for the home according to the market comparison and the current market conditions.

As a buyer, it is recommended to have an agent represent you and work for you. There is generally no cost to you. If the seller is listed with the Multiple Listing Service (MLS), they have agreed to pay their agent and the buyer's agent on behalf of the buyer. If the home you are interested in is a For Sale by Owner (FSBO), then that will be addressed separately in the "Exclusive Right to Buy" buyer's contract. It is required by law that all of these options are explained so that you, the buyer, understands who the agent is representing.

If you are seriously interested in purchasing a home and receiving Client-Level Services, we will provide you with an Agency Disclosure brochure to start the process. This brochure explains in more detail

Preferred Buyer Home Search Guide

When we are working with you as your agent in the search and purchase of your home, please follow these guidelines.

1. Ads in Press or Magazines: If you see an advertisement for a home that looks interesting, call us for detailed information. Be sure to provide as much information as possible about the ads.
2. For Sale by Owners: If you like what you see, write down the phone number and address and call us. We will handle everything and obtain the information, report back to you, and arrange an appointment if desired. Please don't call them; that is our job.
3. For Sale Signs: If you see a "For Sale" sign by another company on a home and you want to know the price, call us, and we will get all the details for you.
4. Open Houses: When visiting an open house, be sure to tell the Realtor that you are working with Connie Rice & Partners with Keller Williams. They will be happy to give you a tour. Do not sign any papers without us. Call us with any questions.
5. Home Study: Do your homework. Study the listings that we give you. If possible, drive by and check out the neighborhoods. Talk to some neighbors. Review the room sizes, features and remarks. Make sure the features are what you are looking for.
